

IG Living! Magazine Announces Fourth Annual Essay Contest

PRESS RELEASE | April 14, 2014

I Temecula, CA

IG Living magazine's fourth annual essay contest is now underway, offering the publication's readers, Facebook fans and others within the immune globulin (IG) community the opportunity to have their winning essay published in an upcoming issue.

"Our readers find it empowering to share their stories and help others who are dealing with the challenges of chronic illness," says Ronale Tucker-Rhodes, editor-in-chief, IG Living magazine. "The contest is open to patients who depend on immune globulin and their caregivers, and will provide a platform for budding writers with aspirations to be published in a national magazine."

For this year's contest, entrants will be asked to begin their essay with the following lead sentence: "If I had the chance to live illness-free for 72 hours I would..." The first place winner will receive an iPad mini and have their essay published in the magazine. Second and third place entries will each receive a $50 gift card and be published in the magazine's weekly blog. For complete details, rules and guidelines, visit www.IGLiving.com.

IG Living reaches nearly 30,000 readers every two months, including more than 19,000 physicians, nurses, case managers and other healthcare professionals involved in treating patients with IG therapy. For more information or to subscribe, visit www.IGLiving.com.
